V. Reasoned statement under Article 35(2) with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability; citations and explanations supporting such statement

1. Statement

Novelty (N)	Claims 1-10	YES
	Claims	NO
Inventive step (IS)	Claims 1-10	YES
	Claims	NO
Industrial applicability (IA)	Claims 1-10	YES
	Claims	NO

2. Citations and explanations (Rule 70.7)

Reference is made to the following documents from the International Search Report (ISR0) :

D1:US-A-4840219
D2:JP-A-05-269542
D3:JP-A-05-237596
D4:JP-A-04-202608

1) The present invention relates to the water soluble salt which is high in latent heat and ranges from 280 to 520 °C in melting point and from 9.8×10^{-2} to $1.2 \times 10^1 \text{ W/m} \cdot ^\circ\text{C}$ in heat transfer coefficient when it processed into a fine powder and molded in a core mold under pressure, whereby the disintegrative core is manufactured from the water soluble salt.

2) D1 discloses the method for preparing a water disintegratable casting core, including the steps of: providing a water soluble molten salt; dispersing 10-50% by weight of a particulate material in said molten salt, the particulate material being non-reactive with the salt and comprised of refractory materials having a mesh size of at least 200; casting the molten salt dispersion into a mold; cooling the mold and the core contained therein; and removing the cooled core from the mold.

3) D2 and D3 disclose the sand core which is heated, dried and then rinsed successively, subjecting to an inorganic salt treatment, drying, and then dipping in the first coating solution to uniformly apply the first coating on the surface of the sand core (To obtain a sand core capable of sufficiently applying a coating and excellent in collapsibility even for a sand core hardened by the warm box method).

4) D4 discloses the core which is made by water soluble substance such as sugar and salt and is set in a mold, and the powder S of noble metal such as gold is filled around its circumference. The core is dissolved away by infiltrating the hot water from many pores therein.

5) For the analysis of the novelty and the inventive step, D1 is considered to represent the most relevant state of the art. The difference between the subject matter of the present application and the method described in D1 is that the water soluble salt in D1 is as high as above 660 °C in melting temperature (Cracks are easily caused owing to the shrinkage upon solidification so that the cores become brittle and are difficult to handle). Additionally, a substantial period of time is required to remove the cores of high pressure cast articles because the cores must be dissolved by use of water, and the core salts thus obtained cannot be re-used.

6) Accordingly, the subject matter of independent claim 1 seems to be novel (PCT Article 33(2)).

7) Since none of the documents D1 to D4 teach or fairly suggest the water soluble salt, alone or in combination with a fine hard powder, is melted in melting point ranging from 280 to 520 °C, so that the core manufactured from said salt can be re-used to bring about an economical favor, the subject matter of the above claim 1 appears to involve an inventive step in the sense of PCT Article 33(3) as well.

8) Claims 2-10 also comply with PCT Article 33(2) and 33(3), as they are dependent claims.

9) Industrial applicability is obvious (PCT Article 33(4)).
